Auto Crashes Through Fence Driver Has Narrow Escape

Smashing through a ten foot board fence, leveling a telephone pole and partially wrecking his big racing Simplex, I. P. Fetterman was a plaything in the hands of fate yesterday afternoon when his car got beyond control, as he was making a turn at a speed of 74 miles an hour while practicing on the Belle Vernon race track. Fetterman had brought his machine to the track to try out in preparation for the two day automobile meet which will be held today and tomorrow under the auspices of the Automobile Association of Western Pennsylvania.

Fetterman, although badly shaken up and suffering from bruises over many parts of the body, stated tonight that he will race tomorrow if his machine is fixed in time.

The Pittsburgh driver had everything wide open and was making the round with tremendous speed when one of the front tires blew out. Although he shut off instantly, the car swerved and headed straight for the board fence which encloses the track.

About twenty feet of the fence was torn up and a hole the size of the car was visible in the dismantled section after the machine passed. The car was stopped about 50 feet further when it struck a telephone pole breaking the pole off a few feet above the ground. The impact with the pole probably saved Fetterman's life, however, as a sharp decline just in front of him would have turned his machine turtle.

Arm Was Broken

Jesse J. B. Wall, candidate for Register of Wills met with a bad accident yesterday when he was unfortnuate enough to break his right arm just above the wrist while cranking an automobile. The break was rather a bad one, but despite this fact, Mr. Wall went to the office of a nearby physician and had the injured member set and dressed and at once began preparations for renewing his active campaign of the county.

Mr. Wall early this morning in company with a party left for the Ligonier valley where he expects to spend a day or two. Mr. Wall's many friends will regret this unfortunate accident and will hope that he will soon recover.

Police Court News

Ellsworth Cumberson was the first prisoner to face the burgess this morning. He was charged with being drunk. On account of it being his first offense, he was discharged.

Charles Shackelford and William Mickey of Pricedale, farmers by occupation, were given a hearing on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. They plead guilty and asked for their freedom, promising to keep sober in the future. They were discharged.

Fred Purella and Frank Hummola, both traveling musicians of Philadelphia, strolled into town yesterday to pick up some stray money. They did not think it necessary to have a permit to play on the street and both landed in the cooler. This morning the burgess discharged them, but informed them that they would either have to get out of town or get a permit. They took the former choice and left town.

Youthful Prisoner Returns

The prison doors will probably yawn for another of Westmoreland county's high officials when the facts become generally known and blame is fixed. A prisoner was regularly and legally committed to the care and keeping of the county officials, he escaped and was absent for a week before the proper officer knew anything about it, and there is a stir among local officials that is bound to cause trouble.

Nick Young of Monessen was bound over to court on a charge of burglary and was sent to Greensburg and turned over to the county authorities to await a hearing before the juvenile court. The boy was away from home about two weeks, when to the surprise of his parents and the prosecuting officers, he suddenly returned one day. He was asked for an explanation as to how he escaped from jail and he remarked that he just walked away, but the officers here are pretty certain that he must have had some money as they doubt that he walked all the way home from Greensburg.

The Probation officer was here yesterday collecting evidence for the hearing and when a visit to the house was made, the information was given out that Nick was at home. This is the first knowledge that this official had that the child was at home and in order to convince her it was necessary to hunt the boy up and produce him as a living witness. When the boy got away, no one seems to know. Where he was stored when he made his escape is yet to be learned, but the local police who spent many hours capturing the lad and gathering the evidence upon which to convict will demand that a full measure of justice be doled out to those who are responsible for allowing him to escape, since it is evident he did not break jail. People here are going to demand that the dignity and majesty of the law be upheld and that if any official deliberately allowed the boy to escape that justice be administered.

Local Autoist In Collision Today

Quite a little excitement was caused in Monongahela about 10 o'clock this morning when Peter N. Miller of this city, driving his seven passenger Buick touring car, collided with the Donora street car at Fourth and Main streets. Mr. Miller, with several passengers was driving his car down Fourth street and was just making the turn at Main, when the street car came into sight and before the motorman could bring his car to a stop, the automobile and street car came together. Very little if any damage was done to the automobile, but the fender of the street car was badly smashed. No one was injured. The street car was in charge of Conductor P. J. Moore, with John Dick as motorman.

City Dads In Session Wednesday

Council met in special session at the borough building Wednesday evening with all members present and transacted several matters of importance to the borough. The real estate committee was instructed to secure a location for the borough stables and also to strengthen the floor in the borough building in order that the fire truck could be kept there.

With the arrival of the fire truck which is expected some time next month, many changes will take place about the borough building, and the borough horses and patrol wagon will be compelled to find new quarters. The fire committee was instructed to get prices on a fire alarm system for the city.

The water committee made a report in regards to their investigation of the water company and it was decided to await until a number of important decisions had been handed down by the Public Service Commission on suits of other boroughs before any action should be taken. The committee will go to Greensburg on September 14 to hear the testimony of the borough of Greensburg against the Westmoreland Water company. Secretary Pittman was also instructed to secure the water decision in the Tarentum water case.

City Solicitor Wyant will confer with Attorney Eicher in regards to securing a settlement in the Alberts case. Mr. Alberts has sued the borough for damage to his stock when a sewer was flooded.

The street car company will be notified to place dimmers on their lights when the cars are running within the borough limits. They were also notified some time ago to put fenders on their cars, but as yet have not complied with the request.

Miss Ethel Southern entertained about twenty of her friends at a corn roast at the McMahan orchard last evening Following the feast of a huge kettle of sweet corn, hot "weiners" and a quantity of fruit, the guests retired to the McMahan home where they enjoyed several musical numbers by the guests.

A farewell party was given last evening by Miss Marion Lewis at her McKee avenue home in honor of Miss Delia Jeffries and Miss Freda Gilchrist, who expect to leave September 6 for the fall term of school.

A Great City

Did you ever stop to think that our city is a city that employs many natural and acquired resources—a city that needs but the skilled manipulation of man to make them yield bountifully of their rich treasure—a substantial city whose foundations are laid upon a soil that cannot be surpassed for productiveness—a city whose educational advantages have reached a standard through the skilled direction of competent officials, second to that of no other place of its size anywhere—a city where harmony among the different churches is in perfect accord with the object sought by our forefathers of the "May flower" and all doctrines are ably expounded with untrammeled freedom from the pulpits of our different churches—a city whose social advantages are equal to those afforded by places many times its size and age—a city where the rich enjoy every luxury desired, and the poor are not allowed to suffer—a city where peace and good will toward all men is exemplified.

The Big Factor

The great amount of space used in newspapers by those in operation of the moving picture industry demonstrates the force of newspaper advertising Almost exclusively the moving picture men confine their advertising to the newspapers, running the serials in connection with their announcements and display advertising, and the rewards have been reaped by crowded houses and a general liberal patronage of the moving pictures. The moving picture industry in every city in the land has grown to such an extent that it is generally recognized as the most fertile field of public entertainment, education and enjoyment, It has grown and prospered with the age and the advancement in the service is remarkable. The newspaper has been the big factor in throwing on the light and the movie men know it.

A New Way

The faces of candidates along the state highways will soon be a thing of the past. Not because the election will soon be history but because the administration expects to enforce a ruling that any candidate who nails his face in conspicuous places along the highways will be prosecuted and required to pay a heavy fine. The practice must be broken up, and candidates must seek other ways of advertising. In the future it is likely that the columns of the newspaper will be more popular for this form of publicity, even if it does cost a little more.

About all there is to the breaking off of diplomatic relations between this country and Germany seems to be the exchange of friendly notes. The "strict accountability" phrase seems to effect the situation very slightly. Any negotiations that will prevent entanglements in this gorey malstrohm will be satisfactory to the American people.

It is understood that under the Brumbaugh administration Westmoreland county will get from the state $12,000 for the construction of state highways in the next two years. This seems to be the dividends coming to one of the greatest counties in the state as the result of the housecleaning down at Harrisburg under the Brumbaugh regime.

The September American Magazine

In the September American Magazine, Stanley Johnson writes the first of a series of articles entitled "Youth Leads the Way," which is to show how boys and girls from ten to eighteen years of age, are adding untold sums to the wealth of the country. These boys and girls, under the direction of the Department of Agriculture, are taking hold of farming in various states and showing their elders how more can be got out of the land. Last fall in Ohio, alone, 1,200 boys added $20,000,000 to the wealth of the state.

In the same issue Jerome D. Travers, present open golf champion of America and four times amateur champion of the United States, writes a wonderfully interesting article entitled "Golf Nerve Under Fire." He tells many stories of great players who have won or lost matches in tight pinches. The total effect of the article is to cheer up the "duffer," because star players, as well as the poor players, are shown to have bad days. Harry B. Smith, who has written the dialogues and lyrics of one hundred and thirty musical comedies, involving between three and four thousand songs, contributes a highly entertaining article entitled "Some Inside Information About the Musical Play." Ida M. Tarbell writes another article in her business series entitled "The Golden Rule in Business," in which she shows the important part that athletics play in industrial life today.

Fiction is contributed by Susan Glaspell, Philip Curtis, Walter Prichard Eaton, John A. Moroso, Ellis Parker Butler and David Grayson.

The two departments, "Interesting People," and "The Family's Money" are full of good reading and practical suggestions. The prize winning letters in the contest entitled "The Thing I am proudest of," and James Montgomery Flagg's amusing piece in words and pictures entitled "A Marriage Vacation," complete a lively and attractive number.

Monessen people endorse their worth.

Mrs. J. F. Leonard, 7 McKee avenue, Monessen, says: "I was bothered by a dull, heavy pain in my back for several years. While doing my housework, my back throbbed just like a toothache. If I stooped over, the pain caught me and I could hardly straighten. I often got so dizzy that I had to sit down. My head ached and my eyes were affected. I felt tired and languid all the time. I tried everything but didn't improve until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at the Hirsch Drug Co. The second box drove away the trouble. Occasionally I take a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills when I work hard or catch cold. They never fail to help me."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Leonard had. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Broken Coin

A Story of Mystery and Adventure

By EMERSON HOUGH

From the Scenario by Grace Cunard

(Copyright, 1915, by Wright A. Patterson)

SYNOPSIS.

Kitty Gray, newspaper woman, finds in a curio shop half of a broken coin, the mutilated inscription on which arouses her curiosity and leads her, at the order of her managing editor, to go to the principality of Gretzhoffen to piece out the story suggested by the inscription. She is followed, and on arrival in Gretzhoffen her adventures while chasing the secret of the broken coin begin.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

CHAPTER XXIX.

King Cortislaw.

"So you find it convenient to enter my room once more unasked?" Kitty's eyes flashed in genuine indignation as she faced Count Sachio.

"It is not your room, mademoiselle, but ours. We pay for it and have control of it."

"So there was some definite purpose in secreting me here away from my friends?"

"Assuredly, a purpose very definite, and one from which we do not intend to be swerved, mademoiselle."

"What then do you purpose doing with me?"

"We plan taking you before the king—not the king of Gretzhoffen, but our own king, Cortislaw of Grahoffen. He wishes to see you, mademoiselle."

Kitty turned back into the room and Sachio, irritated at the delay, went so far as to take her by the arm to induce her to leave the room with him. She resisted him so vigorously that for the time he stood back nonplused.

But at length the girl's powers proved no match for those brought against her. She was forced from the room toward the front of the building.

Once more Kitty adopted the policy of Roleau himself—she ceased to struggle when she found struggling useless, and lay back to wait until a time when resistance might be more effective.

"Very well, then, gentlemen," said she. "Do as you like. I am weaker than yourselves. Since you are men and gentlemen, naturally you are strong."

Count Sachio made no answer to her biting words. In truth, matters had not gone so well with him as he would have liked. He had been ordered to report to his own king, and now must soon make that report, and certainly he could not tell of the unqualified success which he had so confidently hoped.

The insignificant distance which separated these two kingdoms was spanned in hours, somewhat to the wonderment of Kitty, schooled in the great distances of her own country.

Arrived in the capital of Grahoffen, she was allowed small time to arrange her toilet or compose herself after the fatigue of the journey. Very presently she was brought before King Cortislaw himself.

She found him an old man, thin, wrinkled, crabbed, irritable, excitable.

Cortislaw regarded the young girl steadily as she stood before him.

"So this is the woman?" he demanded of Count Sachio, who stood humbly by.

"The same, your majesty. She can explain what you desire to know."

The king looked intently at something he held in his hand. Kitty caught sight of it—it was the half coin which she had once possessed, which had been taken from her but lately by these men. Evidently Count Sachio had turned it over forthwith to its royal possessor.

"Mademoiselle," said he, "tell me what it says. The inscription is broken. I wish to know it all. I am informed that you have seen both halves of this coin, and therefore know the entire message. Read it to me at once."

Kitty took the coin in her hand as though to study it, but swiftly put her own hand behind her back as she clutched it.

"It is my property," said she stoutly. "Not even a king can take away property without course of law."

Even a king was astonished at the effrontery of the young girl—who held her possession until two sturdy guards forced the coin from her hand. The king smiled at her, a somewhat toothless smile.

"So you value it? Many do. We are willing to pay for what we have, mademoiselle—and the message of this coin we mean to have. Give it to us, and you shall be set free."

"Your majesty is liberal—you offer what is already mine—the right to liberty. But what you ask is impossible for me. True, I have seen each half of the coin—even I saw both halves at one time—but never have I read the entire inscription."

"But you have seen both halves," went on Cortislaw. "Tell me, what was on the other half."

"Your majesty, I cannot—I do not know."

"By the saints of our fathers," exclaimed Cortislaw, "if this were in the olden days the torture chamber should show you something. But now—"

"The torture could wring only deception from me, your majesty, and that deception would be of no service to you. I have told you the truth—and that alone can serve you. Give me my liberty again—and then perhaps I might learn more of the other half of the coin."

"The girl argues well," said Cortislaw. "I am not sure whether or not she speaks truth, but her argument goes to the same thing in either case. Let her go under guard—perhaps something may arise to give us further insight into this.

"As for you, Count Sachio, you have not yet suceeded in what was asked of you—you have not yet taught us where lies the hidden treasure of Gretzhoffen!"

"Your majesty," replied the count, reddening, "it is but inadvertence, which shall be amended. In my zeal I fancied your majesty would rather have this young woman than to have the other half of the coin. To secure that may require yet more time."

The king fixed on him the cold smile which his courtiers had learned to dread, yet he could not fail to see the shrewdness of Sachio's reply.

"At least guard her, then," said he dryly. "She shall be our guest until we learn more of what she knows. It means too much to forego the full reading of that coin these days. I mean to have it. I trust all my officers will realize that fact."

"Mademoiselle," said Sachio to Kitty, later, when she had been withdrawn to quarters which virtually were to prove a prison to her, "You have heard what the king has said—he will allow you to return to your own country unharmed if you but help him to the meaning of that inscription. What is it to you? It is only idle curiosity brings you hither. With us it may mean the life or death of our country."

Kitty gave herself up to certain reflections at the time. As to war between the two kingdoms, if it came, why should she aid Grahoffen against the country with which she had become more familiar? Neither had done her much courtesy, true, but for some strange reason her sympathies were not with the country governed by this irascible and unlovely king.

"Think well, mademoiselle," went on Sachio, "It is a long way from here to your country. The coin can mean but little to you at best."

"It may mean much to me," broke out Kitty suddenly. "Listen. This coin is not the property of your king or of that other king. It is the property of the people of these countries. It seeks to tell them its story—not to any king for his selfish purposes—but it seeks to make known its appeal for justice and liberty. What, think you the people will forever be content to remain a shuttlecock between you two?"

A moment later and he had left her once more to her own devices.

CHAPTER XXX.

King Michael of Gretzhoffen.

Meantime in Gretzhoffen town the people remained irresolute, uncertain, making no further overt attempt at the long-pending revolution. And as they waited their king amused himself after such fashions as had long been his own. Continually he changed, sometimes hoping, again dreading; and as often as he changed he sent for Count Frederick, on whom he leaned in fatuous confidence.

"But, my dear count," he reproached that gentleman one day, "you have left one errand uncompleted. You have brought us our coin back again, that is true, but the young lady who we fancied would come after it still remains absent from our court. There has been no word from her for many days."

"True, your majesty, she has disappeared, it seems. I do not, myself, know where she is."

"You have made inquiry at her usual place of residence—some hotel, was it not? An absurd thing, for such a woman as herself to live in a hotel."

"At her hotel," replied Count Frederick, "they know nothing. They tell me that she comes and goes at all hours, and leaves no word as to her return. Nearly two weeks ago she left, and has not yet returned."

"There may be many reasons," continued the count, "for her continued absence. Perhaps the business upon which she came is not yet completed. Perhaps her employers have called her away. Perhaps she may have been intimidated by certain obstacles in her way?"

"By whom, Count Frederick?"

"Well, she has seemed curious herself regarding the coin. Perhaps she knew somewhat of it—"

"So she also has studied this trinket that we gave her? Very well—we meant it to prove of interest."

"Doubtless. But regarding the coin so many threats have been made—"

"Threats? What threats? What do you know of any?"

"Many things come to my ears, your majesty, but I strive to keep them from your own ears so much as may be when I find them unwelcome."

"The most unwelcome thing that could come to us, my dear Frederick, is the absence of this young woman now. Where, think you, she may be?"

"I could not guess, unless perhaps she may have returned to her own country—in which case we shall never see her again, your majesty. We can make examination of the passenger lists of all sailings within the last two weeks. I will look into that. If she has not gone back to her own country, she either remains in this somewhere, or in some other near by."

"You do not mean Grahoffen?"

Count Frederick nodded. "That is what I do mean. In truth, your majesty, there are Grahoffen spies in this city—they were even at your ball. Perhaps they concern themselves with this young lady. Why not? If they by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
